6 End User Services terms

6.1 When this section applies

This section applies only in relation to digital data capture services (and not CDR services) where we provide Services that involve us retrieving and/or processing a person's Account Information (End User Services). This includes the following Services: BankStatements, BankFeeds, StatementOCR, Categorisation, Transaction Risk Score, Insights, Business Disclosure, Switch, Authenticate, Broker Flow and Responsible Lending Portal.

6.2 We require authorisation from End Users

We'll only provide the Services for an End User if they've given their authorisation, as set out below (Authorisation). We can only provide the Services for as long as the Authorisation is in place.

How is Authorisation provided?

If you direct End Users to the BankStatements website	Authorisation is provided directly to us by the End User when they agree to the End User Terms via the website. This gives us permission to access and use their End User Credentials and Account Information.
If you provide Account Information to us directly	You must obtain the Authorisation from the End User (for example, by linking to the End User Terms in your engagement terms). You must keep records of the Authorisations and provide them to us within 30 days if we ask. If an Authorisation is withdrawn, you must let us know right away.

Except as otherwise set out in this Product Schedule, we may de-identify and use the Account Information to improve the Experian Services and create other data products (as authorised by the End User).

6.3 Your obligations

You are solely responsible for letting each End User know what type of Authorisation they are providing to us:

Authorisation types

Single use Authorisation	Authorisation for us to use the End User Credentials to perform a once-off retrieval of the Account Information (in accordance with the End User Terms). The End User Credentials are destroyed after use.
Ongoing use Authorisation	Authorisation for us to use and retain the End User Credentials to retrieve Account Information on an ongoing basis (in accordance with the End User Terms). The End User Credentials are encrypted and only used when retrieving Account Information. We can only retrieve Account Information on an ongoing basis if we have current End User Credentials.

Note: Account Information retrieved using End User Credentials is encrypted to pass to you and retrieval service logs are retained for 72 hours (unless otherwise agreed).

If a Service requires an End User to provide taxation information as part of their Account Information, we will only do this as a Single Use Authorisation. No tax file number information will be provided to you (and you must not represent that it is).
